

Time when would the explained death

One day a woman lost her young son, just a few days before her husband had died. Kissa Goutami was her name, and now her only son had died.

She was in great despair, naturally the child was her only hope. Buddha was staying in the town; people said, "don't cry and don't weep. Why don't you take the child to the Buddha?"

He is so com-passionate, he may revive him back to life.``The women rushed with the dead body of the child. Buddha looked at the woman, told her to put the child in front of him and said to her, "yes, I will revive him, but you will have to fulfill one condition."

The woman said, "I am ready to give even my life. Say any condition and I will fulfill it." Buddha said, "it is a simple condition, I never make big requirements of people, only small requirements. This is a very simple thing.

Just go into town and bring a few mustard seeds. Just remember one thing: the master seed should come from a house where nobody has ever died." The woman was in an insane state, she could not see the point. How can you find a house where nobody has ever died?

She rushed with great hope and she knew that every house had mustard seeds because that was the only crop the people were growing. The whole village was growing it, so there was no problem.

She knocked on many doors, the people said, "a few mustard seeds? We can bring cartloads of mustard seeds, but we can not fulfill the condition; many people have died in our house. So our master seeds won't do."

When night dawned, the woman came to her senses, she had knocked on every door in the village and slowly she saw that death is inevitable; it happens to everybody, that nobody Can escape from it.

When she came back to Buddha she was a totally different woman. Her child was lying there and Buddha was waiting. He said, "where are the mustard seeds?"The woman laughed and fell down at his feet and said: "initiate me into your path, because I have understood your message, that everybody has to die.

Today my son died, a few days before my husband died, and a few days afterwards I am going to die before I die. I want to see the deathless. Now I am not interested in my child being raised from the dead. I am interested.... Myself in seeing eternal life."

Buddha said,- that was the purpose of sending you, so that you can be awakened." And he initiated kissa Goutami.

Moral:- You see in life. or let's say: there is no life without death and there can't be death without life we all have our own clocks ticking. And it may seem unfair why some people die before others but it is just a circle of life. If there is no light, there can be no darkness, if there is no bad, there can't be any good. If there is no death.

There can't be life. Understanding this may seem beyond us for we are attached emotionally to all the people that we love, and rightly so! Life is a beautiful journey so enjoy every second and minute together with the people that you love.
